

The Boy Who Loved Monopoly

Mark Dahle Portfolios can be read in a few minutes and then enjoyed for a lifetime. Thought-provoking and beautiful, they feature an unusual combination of compelling photographs, a brilliant painting, and deceptively simple text. This portfolio includes twenty-seven beautiful photos of Venice, Italy, and a story of a boy who loved to play Monopoly. One day the boy received $250,000 as an inheritance. From the book: You probably haven't inherited any money this week. But you've got lots of gifts and lots of things that you're good at or could be, after you get more practice. What will you do with all the gifts that you have?
