

Olga Romanoff: or The Syren of the Skies

A Sequel to The Angel of the Revolution
The spectacle of a wonderland of Art and Science brilliantly outlined against the dark background of a Universal Eclipse. -The Publisher, Volume 8, Issue 61, July, 1894
Mr. George Griffith has made himself a high reputation as an imaginative novelist by his brilliant romances, The Angel of the Revolution and The Syren of the Skies. -Sketch The Empire Strikes Back, The Force, and A Death Star: Originally written In 1893. Russia and her Middle-Eastern allies go to war with America, Great Britain and Western Europe. Is it current events in 2013? No. Its the premise of a science fiction novel first published in 1894! A dystopian classic of scientific romance from the Victorian era. Olga Romanoff, the ruthless heir to the long-vanished Russian throne, is determined to seize the hereditary power of her family again. Her seduction and drugging of a young Aerial, Alan Arnold and manipulations against the advanced Aerials (the peacekeepers of 2037), enable her to capture one of their powerful airships. The Aerials are a scientific culture who dwell in a valley in central Africa accessible only from the air. They alone know the secret of aerial navigation and use it to impose peace upon the Earth. The Aerials will not allow any other nation to build up an air fleet but now Olga Romanoffs new alliance with radical Islamists allows her to reproduce her captured airship in secret factories of the Middle East. Armed with her own Russian forces and new-found Moslem allies, their armies and their submarine and aerial fleets, Olga Romanoff attacks Europe and America, attempting to forge a new empire. While upon the seas Alan Arnold wages an intense personal war with an advanced submarine against the Romanoff forces to seek redemption for the carelessness that had cost him his airship and made it Olgas prototype. The Aerials lead the resistance, building up a strong coalition from Britain and America. The capitals of Europe are laid waste in aerial bombardment but as war wreaks havoc across continental Europe, cosmic events are at play which threaten all life on earth. The advanced Martians - with whom Aerial scientists have established contact warn of the Earths disastrous collision with an enormous comet. As the comet grows ever larger in the Earths skies, the great war staggers to a close, with the Aerials and their Anglo-Saxon Federation appearing to win, but will it be a hollow victory? Griffith keeps up the tension until the very last, taking the reader to a shattering climax and denouement.
