

Dogs for Newbies: Dog Types, Dog Foods, Training, and More

...If you are thinking of getting a new dog for your family, be sure you are prepared for this commitment. Smaller dogs will require at least a 14-16 year commitment, and larger dogs will require at least 10 years. If you are not prepared to own the dog for its entire life, then do not choose a dog as a pet. Let your lifestyle determine what breed of dog you should bring into your home. For example, if you're a jogger, get a type of dog that can run with you, not a toy-poodle. Likewise if you are quiet home-body, look for a smaller dog that enjoys pampering and living it up on your sofa. Avoiding a mismatch means both of you will be happier. Owning a dog is quite a large financial commitment. Every dog requires good quality food, general supplies and medical care; this can range in cost from $700 to $1000 per year. Emergency vet care is very expensive, in some cases thousands of dollars, so you might want to consider purchasing pet health insurance...
