

Einstein Must Die!: Fate of Nations, Book 1

1910 AD - Impending war with England has given Nikola Tesla the chance to build his dream: a weapon to end all wars. The American steam-powered Beowulf tank is larger than a house, and carries enough firepower to face an army. Beowulf also has a mechanical brain, embedded with the consciousness of Colonel Browning, Americas best military strategist. But in England, King George has put Albert Einstein to work for his own war effort: zeppelins capable of reaching the former colony, and new, radiological bombs to remind them of the price of disloyalty. When two brilliant pacifists wield technology to bring peace to a planet at war, the final outcome will surprise them both, and the world.
