

TURNING OUT THE LIGHTS: Concussions, Spectacle and the NHL

In 1998 Steve Bocking suffered his second concussion in two years playing hockey. His father was a surgeon who had seen enough. He started a campaign to change the rules, and won in 2011 when Hockey Canada banned all head shots. But the NHL still refuses to listen. When did the game change? What are the dangers of concussions? Why does the worlds top hockey league continue to ignore the evidence?
