

Capturing Motion in Watercolor

This is a book for any artist who has ever wanted to capture the speed and precision of athletic competition, the stealth of a predatory animal, or the splendor of a bird in flight. It is also a book for anyone who has ever wanted to convey, through painting the wildness of a raging wind or the relentlessness of colliding waves. 144 pages. Lew shows how expressive brushwork can convey a sense of motion. The vitality of his brushwork can be seen in a leaping jumble of basketball players, and it is equally apparent in such seemingly inanimate subjects as a rocky sea cliff. After demonstrating a variety of techniques, the author explains how to use thumbnail sketches to work out overall color and compositional problems.
