

How to Paint a Portrait Part 5: Cheek, Chin & Wrinkles

Learn the secrets used by Renoir on how to paint realistic portraits. In this practical step by step portrait painting series you will start your portrait painting journey by following in the footsteps of Renoir. In part 5 of the course you will learn what pitfalls to look out for when painting the cheeks, forehead and chin. You will learn what a keystone is, why there is a dimple on your chin and how to avoid the single biggest mistake in portrait painting. A mistake that can mean the difference between a portrait that looks like it has depth and dimension and one that looks lifeless and flat. Yet this mistake will only take a minute of painting time to correct. You will also be able to follow a step by step tutorial on how to correctly paint wrinkles on the face. Wrinkles that add character to the subject and not make them look like they are made from cracked mud. You will learn how to adjust and change your backgrounds to ensure they don't compete with the portrait for attention, but rather help to tell a story in your painting. You will learn a simple technique that will keep the viewer's eye in the painting and force the viewer to look at your portrait and not anywhere else. A secret that the most successful portrait artists employ, but never tell anybody about. Master artist Nolan Clark is your guide in this superb painting series where you are taken on an interactive journey in the footsteps of Renoir to also emerge as a realist portrait painter on the other end. Although the series tutorials are presented in oils, this series is an absolute must have for any serious portrait artist.
