

Boring Island: A Gelitin Childrens Book

Formed in 1993, the Austrian artist collective Gelitin is famed for its participatory works and events, which have followed somewhat in the tradition of Relational Aesthetics. This artists book, done in the style of a childrens book, marks a new development in their activities--not as an artists book (of which they have produced several), nor as an irreverent, deadpan gesture of humor (ditto), but as a new take on the childrens book. Not quite for children, Boring Island recounts the collectives 30-day adventure on a small island: there were animals, hunger, wind, waves, the sun blazed, it was stormy, and endlessly boring. The book describes Gelitins adventures (or boring lack of adventures) in diaristic form, and is illustrated throughout with cartoonish watercolor drawings.
