

Corporations and the Gold Standard

There is no democracy of self rule in America, only tyrannical rule by the corporacy, born of the Devils marriage in the early 1970s between powerful corporate interests and the three branches of government. But no corporation, even one purely corpocratic in its people and operations, is inherently or pathologically destructive. Consequently, any corporation could potentially be a candidate for positive self reform that would free it from dependence on government and an undemocratic capitalism. The aim of this very short book is to sketch a model of a great corporation that could depend on its own positive performance in seeking the gold standard of corporate greatness.
