

Halfwood Press - The Story: Bonus 2013 Edition

An artist made one-hundred thirty etching presses out of wood and steel. Some people called these halfwood presses works of art. This story tells how the first owners put to use these works of art in the making of their own fine art prints. The artist was once an art professor with a penchant for entrepreneurship. His story is narrated in the voice of Harris Sweed, a fictional retired engineer who, in his student years, wanted also to be an artist. After forty years Sweed reconnected with the art professor, and their meeting launched this account of how the professors dream of a perfect studio led to the Halfwood Press - and is coming back full circle - or, as he put it - recursively. Halfwood Press-The Story is about real people, mostly, but Sweed connects with his muse, inventing new characters. Aware of Sweeds whims and whimsy, the professor suggests taking the story to his imaginary place that he calls Emeralda, where all people do all day is play Games for the Gifts of Life. In ten chapters - each chapter given the tone of a visit with the professor - narrator Sweed writes this account of the professors ultimate epiphany regarding art and performance as his definition of printmaking. The upshot is: Printmaking is the ancestor of 21st C. works of art - including video games! Part II is a list of 120 people who bought Bills presses, each one which includes a few words describing their exchange. Part III is a poem, or lyric, for a ballad titled, Vladimirs Song, composed by Bill for a planned songbook about his imaginary place, Emeraldalda.
