

Cadillac Veritas

Most people view hitchhiking as either a desperate move by someone without resources or as a travel adventure by reckless individuals. I've fallen into both of these categories during my hitchhiking days. But this story isn't about getting from point A to point B. By the early seventies I had hitchhiked more than 25,000 miles across the USA and had a pretty good idea of what was involved. During this same period Conceptual Art was having a resurgence around the International Art Community. As a young artist I was eager to be involved. I decided to combine my artistic concepts with my hitchhiking skills and designed a project that I thought could have some artistic relevance. As with most of my projects, nothing ever turns out the way I expect.
