

The Principles of Teaching: Leadership Training Course

AT THE BEGINNING. Each individual life comes into this world of physical things enclosed within a physical organism which we call the body. We cannot define or explain life, but here it is, a living entity, an ego, a human life within the body. What we often hear said as to the beginning of this life, and of the conditions at its beginning, savors very much of speculation; life is full of mystery, it is understood only by its creator -- God. Whatever it is, it is life, and it is life that ever shall be now that it has begun; it is spirit and spirit is immortal -- this very individual spirit now born will continue somewhere and in some condition forever, it has a beginning but no ending. At its beginning this life seems to be only living capacity and potentiality with a certain fixed nature -- the human nature, and certain tendencies belonging to that nature, which life is now beginning its course of development toward its future goal. All that this human life is and may become we do not know, but we do know that it is dual, it is psyche-pneuma or soul-spirit; it is both psychical and spiritual, it is natural and also moral and religious. Human life is all of this potentially at its beginning and is capacitated for growth of body; soul and spirit. The possibilities of development of this life, now enclosed within the physical organism and quite dependent upon it, in greatness Of character and accomplishment, or in degradation, can be known by us in but a limited degree. This human life, this ego, was originally created in the image of God with the possibility of growth into the full stature of divine likeness. The entrance of sin has so warped this life and changed the moral condition that at birth human life is no longer normal; there is now an abnormal condition of sinfulness, of depravity and weakness, the possibility of development still remains but with an inborn bent to evil added. As a result there is now the necessity for salvation as well as growth or development in order that this life may attain its rightful end, the likeness of God. But whether or not the salvation that has been provided is personally received, there will be a development; character of some sort will be built. The great problem of life is to build a correct character, and the function of teaching is to assist in this building.
