

Peanut shell as a parent- Epilogue of an artwork: What does the nature said?

This booklet is created for an artwork in the exhibition What does the nature said?. It was a mixed-medium installation project with public participation. Participants were given a fish bowl to put it, grow, or develop anything inside. After 10 months, the bowl is ready to show on exhibition. The concept of this work is to resemble the pregnancy process, the fish bowl is the carrier, a womb for nurturing new life. The artwork made use of peanut shell as the theme, to bring out the message that residue is not to be wasted. Even an old shell, can be the nutrient for a new plant, it is the mother of the next generation. We hope that this work of art can raise public awareness on the increasing abortion rate worldwide.
