

tokyo layers

This is Japanese artist Sasaki Makoto's first photo booklet. The hard copy version has been published last November as a limited edition. This series called tokyo layers is the work that has been taken of the landscape of Tokyo from the moving observatory elevator with a combination of long-time exposure and multiple exposure. I think that the city's landscape is an appearance including achievements and stains which the past era has left behind. Sometimes I feel to be able to see through the past as afterimage in a few tens of seconds which was cut at the time of photographing by the appearance and stacking of unique and countless tokyo layer. From among my works, I hope that you will be able to feel the sense of speed which time goes and recognize the fact that individuals and their life are forming by the accumulation of continuous time. And also you will see that the characteristic of the society which individuals belong and the appearance of the city where individuals are living are forming by the passage of time. You will recognize the fact that we are helpless against the flow of time too.
