

Trafalgar

En el Burgundy. ¿Podrias -dijo Trafalgar- escribir un cuento con cada uno de mis viajes?. -Ni loca -le conteste-. En primer lugar los cuentos propuestos por los demas nunca sirven: los cuentos lo eligen a uno, no uno a los cuentos. No me repliques, mira que el maestro Borges esta de acuerdo conmigo. Fumo y me miro a traves del humito azul del corto negro sin filtro pestilente, un asco. Y ademas se sonrio. -¿Y en segundo lugar?- dijo al rato. -En segundo lugar tus viajes son siempre iguales. -¿Eh, che, para, como siempre iguales! -Y, si, te pasan un monton de cosas raras, te le tiras, generalmente con exito, a la mas linda que anda por ahi, ganas pilas de guita, ¿y en que la gastas? En cafe amargo, cigarrillos negros y discos de pasta. -¿Que! ¿No te parece estupendo? -No. Si. Que se yo. A veces me dan ganas de matarte. Y a veces te envidio hasta el caracu. Se rio otra vez, por entre el humo. -Otro cafe, Marcos -dijo. En este libro, Angelica Gorodischer incursiona en una categoria especial del relato, aquella en la que los personajes se reunen en un ambiente cerrado -un club, un bar- y uno de ellos les cuenta sus experiencias a los demas. Aqui el bar es el Burgundy y el protagonista Trafalgar, un viajante estelar tan excentrico como campechano. Del contraste entre el ambiente familiar y reconocible del bar -el mobiliario vetusto, el mozo de siempre, los habitues, el humo de los cigarros, el aroma del cafe? y los fabulosos mundos intergalacticos que Trafalgar visita, surge el efecto de sorpresa y deleite que provoca la lectura de estas paginas.
