

Vision of Life

We describe thoughts, feelings, and hopes of Men and Women who have to face their daily challenges. These innumerable challenges can best be alluded to through poetry and art. In this book Margrete Heising has created many images which emerged from her first contacts with Indian philosophy and art, among others Tagore. Many of the poems were written in contemplating these images. The book reflects some ideas which emerged in our close relationship with the Indian philosopher J. Krishnamurti, while we were staying at his foundation in Ojai, California. We feel that the essence of a human being is unfathomable. Clearly, in our society this aspect of man has become increasingly overshadowed by his scientific superstition on one hand and by a so-called demythologizing of religion and art on the other. An attitude is spreading in which anything that cannot be explained through formal reason and logic is looked upon as irrelevant or even nonsensical. The reaction to this attitude is unfortunately a belief in the irrational and nonsensical. The result of these two approaches to life in general is quite naturally confusion, despair, and cynicism. Art has all too often become an intellectual and arbitrary game governed by the rules of mass market profits and played by egocentric tricksters. A work of art becomes primarily a marketable product whose success is determined by the ability of the sales people to advertise and package it. For example, poetry, one of the oldest art forms of man, tends to become a game of words and accidental associations, a game which soon computers will be better at than man himself. What is lost in all this is the depth of the human being, which can only be hinted at by words like love, soul, intelligence, insight and so forth. It is this area which escapes cogent knowledge but which is determining the very nature of man and woman. We feel that it is in the nature of art, poetry, philosophy, and religion to try to reveal some aspects of this unfathomable essence of man. This act of revelation can of course not be a one-sided, static affair of the artist or philosopher, but rather some kind of communication between a giving and a receiving human being, where giving and receiving become mutual. In this movement between two persons, a movement which is unpredictable, what is true may reveal itself for a fleeting moment. It should be the honest endeavor of an artist - and any human being - to make such moments possible. It is our hope that this little book can speak in this sense to another human being and appeal to our common source which transcends any word and any image.
