

Dream Street: W. Eugene Smiths Pittsburgh Project

In 1955, having ended his high-profile career with Life magazine, W. Eugene Smith spent a year in Pittsburgh compiling nearly 16,000 photographs. Only a fragment of the work was ever seen, despite Smiths conviction that it was his greatest set of photographs. Now, in an assemblage of pictures that Smith asserted were the synthesis of the whole, we see a portrayal not just of Pittsburgh but also of mid-20th-century America by a master photojournalist.
